The Ideal Coffee Drinking Experience

Hello there.

We are a group of masters students from Savannah College of Art & Design learning about methods of contextual research through the Lextant methodology. Designed to convey the ideal experience of something within our daily lives, we saw an opportunity to take a deep dive into the coffee drinking experience, discovering the commonality among this diverse topic.

Through observation research, cultural probes, interviews, sensory cue kits, and affinitization, we have exposed keywords to define the ideal coffee drinking experience.

So grab your coffee, find a comfortable spot, and read through to discover how to speak to an individual's core emotion and idealize the way we all drink coffee.

Framework

I am fulfilled...

To each individual, coffee means something different. To some, coffee is functional. To others, coffee is a way to connect with the people around them. And to others, coffee is a root component of a daily routine. But what is the ideal characteristic behind these varying roles? To be fulfilled, or satisfied in a way that fully develops one's character.

IN CONTROL

I want to be in control of every aspect of my coffee drinking experience, from environment and ambiance, to flavor profile and method of production.

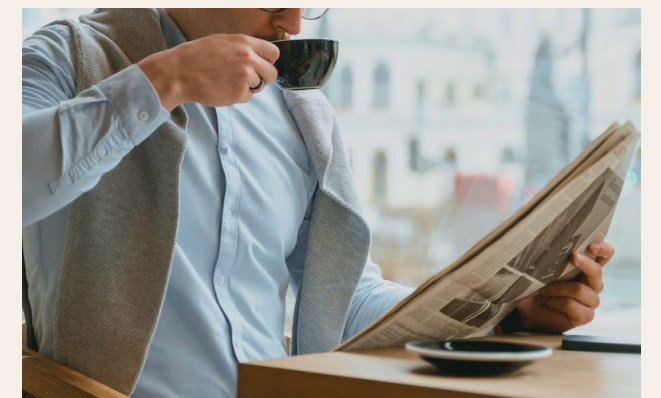

RELIANT

I am reliant on coffee for caffeine, energy, productivity, and function.

EAGER

I am eager to drink coffee each day because coffee is satisfying and flavorful when made the way I prefer.

ENERGIZED

When I drink coffee I am energized and motivated for the day ahead. To me, coffee is a stimulant.

“I am a much better person with coffee than without coffee.”

KEY BENEFITS

I am eager

The experience of coffee is something that people look forward to. While the process may differ based on preferred flavor profiles or machine used, the anticipation that develops is a key component of the process. This includes making an 'event' out of coffee, planning coffee dates, or traveling to experience specialty techniques.

“Making my coffee is sometimes what gets me out of bed in the morning.”

I am

KEY

in control

When it comes to a cup of coffee, there are decisions from start to finish. Whether it is selecting the origin and roast, the temperature, the environment it is consumed in, or even the mug, an individual's control over the process ensures a customized cup each time. For example, through our research, we found it common that many preferred to prepare coffee in their home because they are in full control of how and where it's made.

“But I must explain to you how all this mistaken idea of denouncing”

According to our research, coffee often sets the tone for the rest of the day. Coffee makes people feel productive, motivated, and refreshed, and is an essential part to an effective day. This includes the boost of caffeine and the routine of making a cup. For many, no matter what changes in a day, they have to have a cup of coffee to feel prepared.

“When I drink coffee and start to feel productive, my whole mindset changes.”

I am energized KEY BENEFITS

KEY BENEFITS

I am reliant

Consumers become reliant on coffee because it is functional, it is convenient, and it is a complement to their daily routine. Through our research we discovered that people often feel incomplete without their daily cup of coffee, relying on the boost of energy and comfort it provides.

“Waking up and drinking a cup of coffee with my husband in the morning in our home is one of my favorite parts of the day.”

It is satisfying

KEY FEATURES

The variety of ways to modify one cup of coffee provides opportunity to maximize satisfaction, or the pleasure experienced, for the consumer. Consumers are satisfied with factors such as the nutritional value, the ambiance when consumed, and the way it makes them feel, both physically and mentally.

KEY FEATURES

It is personal

Coffee holds personal and emotional significance. Influenced by culture, such as Indian filter coffee or the Seattle coffee scene, people cultivate their unique cup that holds meaning.

KEY FEATURES

It is tailored

Often times, a person's coffee routine has evolved over time as knowledge expands and taste preferences shift. The ideal cup of coffee is tailored to these changes.

It is motivating

"I feel 'I can do it!' if I have coffee." Before drinking coffee, common emotions are groggy and sluggish. However, after the initial cup of coffee to start the day, research reveals a shift in motivation level and prepares people to tackle the day ahead.

It is a stimulant

KEY FEATURES

Coffee is a stimulant for more reasons than the caffeine level. It excites because of its' tendency to be an experience. Whether it is making an event of an afternoon coffee, or quickly drinking an espresso, the ideal coffee drinking experience includes a boost in energy.

It is a complement

Coffee is a complement in two ways: on the surface, it pairs nicely with pastries and individual health preferences, and on a deeper level, it completes a daily routine.

It is convenient

Convenience when it comes to coffee includes that it's portable, accessible, time efficient, and budget-friendly. While these things differ for each person, the ideal coffee drinking experience can adapt to check those boxes for a wide range of routines and preferences.

It is functional

In the simplest form, coffee serves a function in daily life. It can be a caffeine hit, a source of comfort, a morning ritual, or a way to connect. This means the style of coffee is determined by the function it serves for the individual.
